Hutchinson continued to testify gilbly throughout the afternoon, relating how the government was defrauded in various shipments with apparent unconcern. He was asked why Philip Musica had asked him to arrange for and frauds in preference to other customs employes. The witness said he could not recall just how the first meeting was arranged, and he insisted that he did not know why Musica sought him first.

garding the reported German purchases of gold in London. Bankers say that it would be impossible to import gold with profit at the present rate of exchange. As Berlin bankers view the London situation, the present stringency there is due to the mistaken policy of the Bank of England in maintaining a too low discount rate during the summer. This encouraged speculation in New York and facilitated the purchase of gold for other countries as well as causing English bankers to offer money in considerable sum for German bills.
